TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 MR. SODIKOFF: Yes, sir.

2 THE COURT: Okay. I'm listening.

3 MR. SODIKOFF: Apotex is a generic manufacturer of 4 drugs and it has invested substantial assets to develop a 5 generic version of modafinil. The investment that Apotex has 6 made so far has included formulating a tablet, conducting 7 extensive stability and bioequivalence testing, drafting and 8 submitting proposals and ANDA to the FDA to obtain approval.
9 And through Apotex's efforts, it has been able to obtain 10 tentative approval from the FDA to market modafinil. So 11 the -- Apotex has met all the scientific requirements to get 12 its modafinil on the market. However, Apotex is not on the 13 market and cannot get on the market because of the actions
14 taken first by Cephalon and then joined by the generic 15 defendants.

16 Before the break, this Court asked, "What does Apotex 17 seek here?" Apotex has claims that I divide into two main 18 categories. The first would be declaratory judgment patent 19 claims, and the second would be our antitrust/ --

20 THE COURT: Well, I know what your claims are. My 21 question was what's your advice to me as to how I proceed on 22 those two separate companies?

23 MR. SODIKOFF: Your Honor, we've --

24 THE COURT: Aside from you want me to deny their 25 motion to dismiss.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 MR. SODIKOFF: Right. The 516 patent the defendants 2 have admitted, we have jurisdiction over. The 346 patent I'll 3 go into. I think it's pretty clear we have jurisdiction under 4 Caraco. We would like to have those separated from the rest 5 of the claims in this action and move forward expeditiously.
6 We're, I think, scheduled to receive the documents from the 7 defendants tomorrow pursuant to this court's order. We'd be 8 ready for summary judgment in six months and a trial within a 9 year.

10 We think that everything that you've heard here today
11 really imbues Apotex's purpose here of entering the market 12 with a generic modafinil product and we'd like the opportunity 13 to get there. And if we're allowed to move forward with our 14 declaratory judgment claims on the 516 and 346 we can finally 15 break the bottleneck that the Cephalon and generic defendants 16 have created.

17 I believe we've moved for bifurcation or I think 18 under -- I can't recall the rule right now, another type of 19 separation, I think that's pending before the Court; it might 20 actually have been dismissed leading up to this, but we could 21 re-brief the Court or rely on the pleadings thereof.

22 THE COURT: I think -- and I'm just guessing, but I 23 think it was dismissed when I first got reassigned the case to 24 without prejudice.

25 MR. SODIKOFF: Correct.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 THE COURT: And if you want to -- have you re-filed

2 that motion? I mean if you want to press that, if you want to 3 press it here, re-file it.

4 MR. SODIKOFF: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

5 I'd like to turn --

6 THE COURT: Before you get to your argument on motion

7 to dismiss, very briefly from Mr. Burling and Mr. Lefkowitz,

8 what's your reaction to Apotex's request that we give them a

9 separate scheduling order on the patent claims, six-month

10 discovery period and trial in a year?

11 MR. BURLING: Well, Your Honor, I think for a number

12 of reasons there's --

13 THE COURT: Assuming I deny your motion.

14 MR. BURLING: There's some great difficulty in having 15 cases go forward separately and let me explain why.

16 THE COURT: Okay.

17 MR. BURLING: The overlaps are really -- again,

18 depending on how you handle the motion to dismiss it makes 19 severance difficult.

20 First of all, many of the plaintiff's antitrust

21 theories and claims that you've heard, we'll, we don't think

22 they're credible claims. If they were to go forward, Your

23 Honor, were to describe, for example, that the underlying

24 patent merits needed to be examined as part of the antitrust

25 case, having them examined once in the context of the Apotex

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 516 claims and then a second time separately in the context of 2 the antitrust case, particularly if discovery on one started 3 before the other, you'd have completely duplicative discovery, 4 redundant depositions, you know, there's every reason to put 5 all of the merits of discovery on the 516 together if there is 6 going to merits of discovery. Obviously, if Your Honor 7 dismisses all the antitrust claims, that's a different 8 situation. But you have --

9 THE COURT: But you and Mr. Lefkowitz, I think, have 10 said, "Well, there really is no bottleneck. Apotex can just 11 prosecute their patent claim." So are you suggesting that I 12 prioritize my decisions of, well, there's going to be some 13 duplication, Judge, so delay the prosecution of the patent 14 claim because there's going to be duplication over there, 15 right, which you recognize and really takes care of the 16 bottleneck to prosecute their patent claim?

17 MR. BURLING: Well, I'm not arguing for delay for the 18 sake of delay, if you would, Your Honor. This is going to be 19 an enormous -- if it goes forward, an enormously burdensome 20 and expensive case with lots of discovery.

21 THE COURT: But you guys keep saying it's -- you say 22 "There's no bottleneck problem, Judge. Let them prosecute 23 their case." But now you're saying it's going to be 24 burdensome and expensive.

25 MR. BURLING: No. The --

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 THE COURT: Of course it's going to be burdensome and 2 expensive.

3 MR. BURLING: I think they should prosecute their 4 case. But what I was about to say is that separating it so 5 that all the discovery has to be done once in the patent case
6 and then potentially at a later time in the antitrust case 7 adds -- increases that burden. Beyond that, and therefore 8 we're not arguing for delay, we're arguing simply that when 9 the case goes forward we do the 516 merits discovery if there 10 is such a discovery that pertains to the antitrust case also 11 at the same time. So the inventor deposition, we have all the 12 parties who want to depose the inventor in the room who ask 13 their questions at the same time. We don't have to call each 14 witness back twice; once for a deposition in the antitrust 15 case, a second time for a deposition in the patent case.

16 THE COURT: There's got to be a way to do it. I mean 17 I realize this is an incredibly complicated case but there's 18 got to be a way for what you and Mr. Lefkowitz say that is let 19 them prosecute their case and get rid of the bottleneck.
20 There's got to be a way to envision their day in court without 21 getting caught up.

22 MR. SODIKOFF: Your Honor, I -- just to weigh in, 23 Apotex does not expect to take significant discovery on the 24 patent claims because we're getting all the discovery already.
25 So, I mean, depositions of inventors we maybe want a half day just if

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 we have any follow-up questions. I don't think there's going 2 to be a lot of other depositions that we even want. So to 3 take the step now to delay this --

4 THE COURT: Well, I'll look for your motion.

5 MR. SODIKOFF: Thank you, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: And I kept interrupting Mr. Burling, I'll 7 let you finish and then Mr. Lefkowitz can chime in if he 8 wants.

9 MR. BURLING: Yes, the last thing I said, we will 10 respond in detail in opposition to the motion. But another 11 difficulty, I don't quite know how to come at this is the 12 declaratory judgment counts on the 516 patent include, for 13 example, a patent misuse count.

14 Now, separating a patent misuse count from a patent 15 infringement count, I think, not only is inefficient, I'm not 16 sure that really complies with the claim splitting principles 17 or whatever.

18 The patent misuse count, as I explained, I think, 19 yesterday morning, the definition of misuse is going beyond 20 the bounds of the patent and excluding, that's exactly what we 21 would be examining in any antitrust claim that went forward.
22 The misuse claim in substance is really more of a competition 23 claim, same as an antitrust claim even though in the end it 24 pertains to the enforcement of the patent. So -- unless they 25 waive their misuse plan, I don't know, but there is an overlap

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 there that's very difficult to escape in a motion.

2 THE COURT: Sure. I'm sure it is.

3 MR. SODIKOFF: I would like to --

4 THE COURT: Mr. Lefkowitz, you want to be heard?

5 MR. LEFKOWITZ: Yes, Your Honor, we certainly would 6 be very comfortable having the patent case proceed as 7 expeditiously if the Court is able to hear it. And we would,

8 obviously, second I think everybody's view that we should try

9 to avoid duplicative discovery.

10 THE COURT: Of course.

11 MR. LEFKOWITZ: But we're very comfortable there.

12 THE COURT: Okay. Great.

13 MR. LANGER: It's Howard Langer for Apotex. I think

14 the one thing that --

15 THE COURT: How do you spell your last name, please?

16 MR. LANGER: L-A-N-G-E-R.

17 THE COURT: Go ahead.

18 MR. LANGER: I think that what's clear from Your

19 Honor's question and what's clear from everything you've heard

20 the last two days is that if the patent case were put on

21 anything near the track of the antitrust case we would be

22 spinning wheels in the patent case. It would be of very 23 limited value to Apotex which filed it several years ago and 24 has been trying to come to market for several years. So that

25 the need to sever it and move it quickly is really a function

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 of whether the case is going to provide any use plus --

2 THE COURT: Well, I'm -- I think I'm going to be very 3 receptive to that and very receptive to the argument in light 4 of Cephalon and the generics continued argument that the 5 bottleneck is not an issue here. You can prosecute your 6 patent case. Well, let's take them up on it and let's get the 7 patent case moving. I'm not making that decision now. I'm 8 saying we have to consider their response and I realize now 9 I'm backing myself into a corner. Giving myself more work 10 immediately but I just think the defense and if we insist on 11 their position and I think they -- I'm not saying they're 12 being inconsistent, particularly Mr. Lefkowitz's response, but 13 I'll take a look at what you want to file. Okay. So go 14 ahead.

15 MR. SODIKOFF: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 I'd first like to go into our antitrust claims and 17 then kind of sweep up the declaratory judgment claims at the 18 end. I won't speak to the tortious interference claims 19 because I think we're comfortable with resting on our briefs
20 on that as well.

21 THE COURT: Very well.

22 MR. SODIKOFF: And when I'm complete, Mr. Langer has 23 a short section also.

24 THE COURT: Okay.

25 MR. SODIKOFF: Throughout the last two days, the

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 defendants have told this Court that there is no circuit 2 split, but they haven't really gone through what the 3 implications of that argument are and what that necessarily 4 means. And what it means is that each of the cases that have 5 been decided before this one, Tamoxifen, Cipro, Cardizem, 6 Valley Drug and the rest, were decided on their particular 7 facts. And that the particular facts in each of those cases 8 what was ultimately determinative and that is very critical 9 for where we are right now in a 12(b)(6) in that we haven't 10 developed all the facts. So if there is one case law and 11 different circuits are coming out with different decisions, 12 necessarily it's the facts that are different and we need to 13 develop the facts here to see which one we're closest to.

14 I think it also means necessarily that the scope of 15 the patent is not outcome determinative. It is but one factor 16 to weigh in the balance between the actual adverse affect on 17 competition and the pro-competitive redeeming virtues of the 18 agreements.

19 THE COURT: Could you go back, you said the scope of 20 the patent is what?

21 MR. SODIKOFF: It cannot be outcome determinative.
22 That is, it's not just scope of the patent, I apply that legal 23 rule and I throw the case out.

24 THE COURT: Well, why can't I -- why can't I just 25 look at the scope, examine the patent -- look at the scope of

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 the patent and examine the agreements with the generics? Why 2 can't I do that?
3 MR. SODIKOFF: I'll go into it in a second and show
4 later that there's a lot of factual issues that are involved 5 there.
6 THE COURT: Okay.
7 MR. SODIKOFF: Secondly, that would not be consistent 8 with In re Cardizem because while In re Cardizem was an 9 interim agreement, there is no question that it was within the 10 scope of the patent. A great part of it was keeping a generic 11 off the market which is within the scope of the patent and 12 still the Sixth Circuit held that it was an illegal 13 arrangement and in fact, per se, illegal. So you can have 14 something occur within the scope of the patent and I'd also 15 like to cite the U.S. v. Singer case. There, the plaintiff, 16 and this is a Supreme Court case that's briefed in our 17 opposition, the plaintiff had a valid issued patent and 18 decided to pursue it against only Japanese manufacturers.
19 There was no claim that the actual infringement suit was a 20 fraud or a sham. Yet, the Supreme Court still held that 21 pursuing these Japanese competitors was illegal under the 22 antitrust laws. That is, the actual litigation was within the 23 scope of the patent yet it was still an antitrust violation 24 and the Supreme Court looked at the intent and scope and the 25 purpose of the parties in what they did. And there they

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 colluded in an interference proceeding to get a patent but 2 there's no allegation that the patent wouldn't have issued
3 anyway. And here you have the generic defendants in Cephalon 4 colluding to abuse the Hatch-Waxman Act to create these 5 bottlenecks and also to enforce them against certain 6 competitors like Apotex. The net result here is that Cephalon 7 and the generic defendants are sharing monopoly prices and 8 have come together to enforce the patent against all other 9 comers. And I'll get into a little more about the bottleneck 10 later.

11 So the key thing in Cardizem was that there was no 12 final settlement and that when the Court looked at that and 13 they were weighing the pro-competitive versus the 14 anticompetitive, they took off that pro-competitive
15 justification and the balances swayed. And that's what you 16 have to do in every court, Your Honor -- in every case.

17 THE COURT: This is a Sixth Circuit case?

18 MR. SODIKOFF: That's a Sixth Circuit case.

19 And what we suggest is that even the Second Circuit 20 and the Fed Circuit, which is applying Second Circuit law in 21 Cipro, applies the rule of reason test.

22 And I'd like to read just one quick statement. This 23 is from the In re Cipro case reviewing a district court 24 opinion. And it says at 544 F.3d 1332, "Under the law of the 25 Second Circuit, the rule of reason analysis is a three-step

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 process. First, the plaintiff bears the initial burden of 2 showing that the challenged action has had an actual adverse 3 effect on competition as a whole in the relevant market. Then, 4 if the plaintiff succeeds, the burden shifts to the defendant 5 to establish the pro-competitive redeeming virtues of the 6 action." And then finally, "Should the defendant carry this 7 burden" and this is one of Apotex's arguments, "the plaintiff 8 must then show that the same pro-competitive effect could be 9 achieved through an alternative means that is less restrictive 10 on competition." And I think we'll get to this in the 11 bottleneck that the Cephalon and the generic defendants 12 certainly could have settled in a way that was an alternative 13 means that would be less restrictive of competition.

14 So even under the Second Circuit in the Cipro case, 15 Tamoxifen and Cipro, the court -- the district court went 16 through the specific facts alleged there and found, 17 ultimately, that there was no antitrust violation. But what 18 I'd like to do is show how the facts that are alleged by 19 Apotex are outside of what was considered by Cipro and 20 Tamoxifen, and in fact, Apotex alleges things that in dicta
21 the Cipro court and the Tamoxifen court, the two cases 22 primarily relied on by the defendants, actually said that 23 would be an antitrust violation.

24 So ultimately what Apotex is looking for is quite 25 simply an order that says the motion for -- is denied. And

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 it's denied because there are many questions of fact that need 2 to be resolved in order to weigh in the rule of reason 3 analysis whether there are pro-competitive benefits that 4 outweigh and are the least restrictive necessary.

5 THE COURT: Isn't that a pro-competitive benefits
6 that are what? Say it again.

7 MR. SODIKOFF: The rule of reason weighing analysis 8 looking at whether the pro-competitive benefits such as the 9 final settlement is --

10 THE COURT: Right. The facts that are -- that I have 11 to look at to come to that determination are what? The 12 settlement agreements and the patent, right?

13 MR. SODIKOFF: No, and additional things which I'd 14 like to go into.

15 THE COURT: Go ahead.

16 MR. SODIKOFF: There's three main things here that 17 Apotex alleges that show that the patent is -- that what 18 Cephalon has done here is outside the scope of the patent.
19 The first one is fraudulent procurement and sham litigation.
20 The second is that it covers noninfringing substitutes.

21 THE COURT: Hold on for a second.

22 MR. SODIKOFF: Sure.

23 THE COURT: Because saying fraud and sham those 24 aren't facts; those are allegations.

25 MR. SODIKOFF: Right.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 THE COURT: What are the facts?

2 MR. SODIKOFF: The facts are, and I'm going to grab

3 my --

4 THE COURT: Yes, go ahead. Sure.

5 MR. SODIKOFF: And this is just one of Apotex's

6 allegations in its complaint and this is paragraph 29. And it

7 begins with -- and it's long and it has a lot of specific 8 facts but --

9 THE COURT: You don't have to read it, you can

10 summarize it. I'll read it.

11 MR. SODIKOFF: I won't read it. I'll summarize it.

12 Basically, Apotex looked at what the generic

13 defendants alleged in their inequitable conduct case. The 14 specific facts that were alleged there that were not this move

15 to dismiss by Cephalon that showed inequitable conduct if

16 assumed as being true. And Apotex put each of those specific 17 facts in its allegations here. And next week we can probably 18 supplement instead of on the information in belief if

19 necessary we could put in -- we now have actual knowledge

20 because we'll have those documents that the defendants relied 21 on.

22 THE COURT: Knowledge of what?

23 MR. SODIKOFF: I'm sorry.

24 THE COURT: Knowledge of what?

25 MR. SODIKOFF: We'll have actual knowledge of our

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 facts here. Right now, we've alleged them.

2 THE COURT: Summarize the facts for me. What are the 3 facts?

4 MR. SODIKOFF: Sure. The facts are that during the 5 prosecution of the patent, the attorneys for Cephalon and 6 others who are involved with the prosecution of the patent 7 committed inequitable conduct and committed fraud on the 8 patent office by doing numerous acts that are alleged in 23 9 through 39 of our complaint, they include the fact that they 10 deliberately did not tell the patent office that it was Lafon 11 (ph.), a French company, that was, in fact, the inventor of 12 modafinil as well as the particle size limitations.

13 THE COURT: How are you going to prove that?

14 MR. SODIKOFF: How am I going to prove that?

15 THE COURT: Yes, sir.

16 MR. SODIKOFF: Eventually, we'll prove that with the 17 documents from Cephalon; their correspondence with Lafon 18 showing that Lafon actually told this stuff to Cephalon and 19 these are the precise allegations made by the generic 20 defendants when they saw those exact documents.

21 We're also going to prove and -- Your Honor, at this 22 stage, these facts should be assumed as true. They're 23 specific.

24 THE COURT: Right. I'm not challenging you on are 25 your facts right, I just want to know what they are.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 MR. SODIKOFF: Okay.

2 THE COURT: You say fraud and sham and collusion, 3 those are conclusory statements.

4 MR. SODIKOFF: Sure. Let me step back a little 5 bit --

6 THE COURT: I want you to stay on the same track.
7 You're going to present facts to show that it was a fraud and 8 a sham because you're going to be able to present evidence 9 that there was some type of misrepresentation regarding the 10 actual inventor, correct?

11 MR. SODIKOFF: Right.

12 THE COURT: What else?

13 MR. SODIKOFF: What else? They also had an on-sale 14 bar.

15 THE COURT: A what?

16 MR. SODIKOFF: An on-sale bar.

17 THE COURT: What's that mean?

18 MR. SODIKOFF: An on-sale bar is 35 U.S.C. Section 19 102(b). It is clear and objective standard that if something 20 was on-sale in the United States more than one year prior to 21 the application, it bars getting a patent on what was on-sale.
22 And we have alleged and we'll prove that Cephalon -- that the 23 modafinil product that is claimed here was subject to the on-24 sale bar because it was, in fact, purchased from Lafon prior 25 to the one year filing date under 35 U.S.C. 102.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 THE COURT: And Lafon is the French manufacturer you 2 referenced?

3 MR. SODIKOFF: Correct.

4 THE COURT: Okay. And as to the other facts 5 regarding fraud and sham you said paragraphs 29 through 32 of 6 your complaint?

7 MR. SODIKOFF: Twenty-three through thirty-seven,
8 Your Honor. I'm sorry. I think I said 23 to 39 but it's 23 9 to 37.

10 THE COURT: That's fine. Okay.

11 MR. SODIKOFF: They name specific people, facts, 12 dates, specific statements made by each person. I can get the 13 complaint and go through each.

14 THE COURT: You don't have to do that because we're 15 going to read them

16 MR. SODIKOFF: Right. And the facts that we allege 17 in our complaint which must be assumed is true, are more than 18 what the federal circuit has found to be sufficient to allege 19 fraud and to actually prove fraud in the case. And the 20 looming case there is Noblepharma. It's a Fed Circuit, I 21 believe -- I can't recall the year; maybe 2003. It's in our 22 brief.

23 THE COURT: It's in your brief, right?

24 MR. SODIKOFF: It's --

25 THE COURT: Don't worry about the cite.

TRANSCRIPT OF ORAL ARGUMENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS 10/22/2009 12:00:00 PM

1 MR. SODIKOFF: Sure.

2 THE COURT: If it's in your brief it's fine.

3 MR. SODIKOFF: It's in our brief. And the 4 Noblepharma case, what happened there was the inventor gave

5 something to his patent attorney and it ended up not making it

6 before the PTO.

7 And when you go to get a patent, it's an ex parte

8 procedure when a patentee or an applicant does. And the 9 patent office has a duty of candor because the patent office

10 is not experts like the applicant is. They have one --

11 usually one examiner. He can usually spend one day to examine 12 an application at most. He's busy and he just doesn't have

13 the time. And so there is a burden and a duty that's not

14 disputed by the defendants of candor where you have to be good

15 faith, you cannot lie, you cannot make material omissions.

16 And in the Noblepharma case, the piece of prior art

17 was given to the prosecuting attorney, it didn't make it to 18 the patent office. The prosecuting attorney said "I never 19 have bad intent, generally. I would have definitely given it

20 over if I thought it was important. But I don't remember 21 specifically what happened." And the Fed Circuit affirmed the 22 jury finding of an antitrust violation for fraud on the patent

23 office.

24 The jury was allowed to infer that this man convicted

25 inequitable conduct. That he withheld this on purpose even

1 though there was no direct testimony of it. And there's 2 legion federal circuit cases that say that circumstantial 3 evidence is sufficient because that's usually all that exists.
4 It's very rare to have a patent attorney say I purposely lied
5 to the patent office.

6 Apotex's complaint has these specific facts. They 7 more than meet the Noblepharma standard. And they establish 8 fraud on the patent office. So what does that mean? That 9 means that the patent has no scope. There is no immunity.
10 There is no scope of the patent test. Everything that they 11 had done to decrease competition is an illegal restraint of 12 trade under Walker Process, under Noblepharma.

13 They have two -- I'd like to call them arguments; 14 they're not factual at all and they mention them on the 15 opening. As arguments, they're no way pled by Apotex.
16 They're not in our complaint. But what they've argued is that 17 the generic defendants originally didn't file fraud so there 18 must not have been. And that the FTC did not file an 19 allegation of fraudulent procurement.

20 First, the generic defendants did allege inequitable 21 conduct and the defendants have argued to this Court that 22 there's a huge difference, or at least intimated it, but 23 there's a big difference between inequitable conduct and fraud 24 on the patent office. But if you review the case law, that's 25 simply not the case. Inequitable conduct requires intent to

1 mislead the PTO. It requires a bad intent under Federal

2 Circuit precedent and it requires materiality of what you

3 withhold -- or what you misrepresent to the PTO.

4 The difference with fraud is that instead of having

5 materiality, you have to have but for causation. The intent

6 requirement is largely similar in most inequitable conduct

7 cases. So the generic defendants allege that Cephalon had the 8 bad intent required. And we adopt those exact same specific

9 facts and we will plead that -- we plead them now and I think

10 we have a reasonable basis for pleading them. They're

11 plausible because they're taken directly from sworn pleadings

12 from the defendants in this case.

13 And so the difference is that inequitable conduct is 14 materiality. Fraud is but for causation. That but for their

15 lie -- their omission, lie or omission, the patent would not 16 have issued.

17 We've argued a 102(b) that they withheld a 102(b)

18 invalidating reference that Cephalon and those who prosecuted

19 the patent purposely withheld prior art that would invalidate

20 the patent. That is but for causation. We allege a Walker

21 Process violation. And if nothing else, Your Honor, you can

22 dismiss their motions to dismiss because that exists and

23 they've told us the last two days that we're -- a Walker

24 Process violation exists. There clearly is an antitrust

25 violation.
